Auto repairman to customer:

"If you want, we can freeze your car until future mechanics discover a way to repair it."

My cousin accompanied his elderly mother to prearrange her funeral. Once the major items were taken care of, the funeral director asked her what time she wanted the service. My aunt, after considering the question replied: "It'll have to be in the afternoon. I don't get up till 11:00."

My teenage son, Chad, and nine of his friends came home one night with newly pierced ears. When his grandmother heard about it, she asked him why he did it.

"Peer Pressure," Chad told her. "You should be a leader instead of a follower," Grandma said. "I was," he replied. "It was my idea."

We had a pesky problem with ants in the house; I didn't realize how bad it was until one day when I was in the backyard with my four-yr-old son, "Look, Dad," he said, pointing. "An ant got out of the house!"

The person who won't admit to a mistake has made another one.

After a lesson on horticulture, I asked my Grade V class if they remembered what I had called the plant that came up year, after year, that their parents didn't have to buy or plant seeds every year for it to grow. "Weeds!" retorted a voice from the back.

(Isn't that the truth?)

One morning my boss's wife stopped by and went into his office. A few minutes later, they emerged together. "I'll be back in 20 minutes," he announced. "I'm going for a roll with my wife." "A cinnamon roll," his wife muttered.

Happiness is a habit.
Cultivate it.

One evening, when I was eight months pregnant, I was sitting with my husband and three children at the dinner table. Six-year-old Brendon said, "Mom, I don't think you should have any more children." I was shocked and concerned, and finally managed to ask, "why not?" "Well," he replied, "you don't remember our names now."

Years ago, when someone wore sneakers, it meant that he couldn't afford shoes. Today, if a person is wearing shoes, he probably can't afford sneakers.

Three things in life are hard to do: Climb a forward leaning fence, kiss a backward-leaning woman, and say something clever when accepting a trophy.

One night I developed a protracted case of the hiccups, I tried every remedy with no success. With each hiccup, our bed shook, and I repeatedly woke up my wife. After several "Have you tried!" suggestions, my wife finally said. "Have you tried sleeping in the guest room?"

"I saw the most beautiful cars in the window of a dealership recently," Brad said to me one day, while he was car shopping. A car sales man came out and said to him. "Come on in. They're bigger than ever and they last a lifetime!" Later he learned the salesman was talking about the payments."

The preacher was taking a special offering. Suddenly the town tavern's owner rose and said, "I'll give $2,500." "Badly as we need the funds," said the preacher, "I won't take such money." "Take it, Reverend," yelled a voice in the back, "It's ours anyhow."

Ready to go (The middle of June)

Sociologists say that going to the movies is a bonding experience. It probably has to do with the way your feet stick to the floor.
